

March 22, 1889

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Young died very suddenly on Sunday last. The child had been ailing a little, but its condition wasn't regarded as at all serious. In the morning they started for Claremont, where Dr. Young had announced that he would spend a portion of the week. When a mile from town the child began to moan as if in great pain, but in a short time it became quiet and had the appearance of having fainted. They immediately returned. A doctor was called and the child pronounced dead. Heart trouble is given as the cause. It was five months old and apparently as strong and healthy as any child. 3-22-1889